Ardrossan South Australia - January 25th 2008 until January 28th 2008.

Ardrossan is situated 133kms west of Adelaide on the western side of th Gulf St Vincent.

Fri 25th January 2008: With everyone home from work and the packing done the previous night, we were soon on the road at around 2.00pm for the easy 133km drive through Port Wakefield and onto Ardrossam where we were lucky enough to be able to get two sites so close to the long weekend. The day was hot with very little wind making it hot to set up once arrived. The Caravan Park has been established now for many years and as such the amenities blocks were old but served the purpose well.

Sat 26th & Sun 27th January 2008: We had intentions of crabbing while here for the weekend, but with so many people on the jetty, it just never eventuated. We managed to find other thing to keep ourselves occupied with that there wasn't enough hours in the morning to venture out onto the jetty to catch crabs. Crabbing during the afternoon would be pointless as the water goes out too far leaving only the end of the jetty with water around it.

It was out of bed before sunrise on Sunday morning to photograph the red cliffs at the silo and jetty areas as the sun started to shine but unfortunately there was a big band of cloud cover to the east which reduced the effect that I was after but some interesting photos were achieved so not all was lost.

It was a surprise for us to find a Caravan Park with so many friendly semi permanents that were willing to say hello to people who were the typical weekend visitor. For us, our weekend trip was a weekend to sit around and talk, walk when we felt like a walk and generally laze around and do nothing.

Mon 28th January 2008: For us, the weekend was all but over with the trip home all that was left to complete it. With everyone in our group ready to hit the road just before nine o'clock, we were all too soon sitting back home thinking about where our next trip was going to take us.
